READER GUIDE

How to read a sourced timeline

Start with the date, open the record cited for that event and check whether a later entry changed the position.

STEP 1

Read the date as shown

A date may give a year, a month or a day. Treat each entry at the precision its record supports.

STEP 2

Open the cited record

Read the document for the event it supports. A regulator's immediate action and a later investigation finding answer different questions.

STEP 3

Check for a later decision

A later court can change an earlier result. Compare the decision date and the court before describing the outcome.

Reading the record

A timeline gives the order of events. A causal explanation needs evidence that connects them.
